May 8, 2024: Assessing Farmland	In the beginning of the skillshare it was grounding to learn the many ways one could corne into, legal & logistical relationship with the land . Beeing the process over a 10 year spen, from buying the land to building on it. Understanding the land and where to go for resources. How to build cornnails.	I learned a lot about soil toxing, and how to consider whether a place has the things I need in order to sorvice them. I plan to work with more people who have this skill to share and utilize when visiting terms. I learned that it's not going to happen overnight, but with the right ppl backing and community support it's obaits from and my temp.	I enjoyed being able to benefit from the questions others asked and angles other people considered the information from .	Absolutely: I think providing the technical, tangible skill of getting started and finding useful resources wit save lots of people hundreds of hours of research and potential discouragement. Most definitely, heating from someone who's had the experience and done if for years especially someone from my ethnic background.	I am interested in hearing us describe the land in ways that centralize that she is alwe and having an experience, even when her condition is not suitable to meeting my needs. I would say continue the path of sharing this information, so many of us who need the heip in getting stated.	I am interested in ways to acquire and build relationship with land that does not include money as the only means of trade. On site farming classes.
