Growing and Marketing Ancient Grains in Wyoming – Project Timeline

This will be a two year project and will start with spring planting in April and May of 2019. Participating producers are committed to growing at least one of the ancient grain crops each year. Field days will be held during the summer and project updates will be shared at grower meetings in the winter. Baking workshops will also be held in the winter. Final publications will be completed in the spring of the second year, and an abstract will be submitted to the National Association of County Agriculture Agents for presentation at their summer meeting.
