

Figure 1. Shows the difference between damage to a strawberry fruit due to poor pollination (a) and damage due to tarnished plant bug feeding (b). The two can be differentiated as poorly pollinated achenes are very tiny and have completely failed to develop (as indicated by arrow to fruit a) while achenes fed on by tarnished plant bugs are of similar size to the surrounding undamaged achenes on the fruit (arrow to fruit b).