

Figure 11. The mean number of beetles caught per trap on the four farms. The circles indicate the time of the season that cabbage loopers are in the larval stage in Willamette valley farm fields as predicted by phenology models. The line drawn to the abscissa intercepts the areas whose thickness represents the activity density of all of the carabids mentioned in this study, and other species grouped by size class.